OUR BORDER TROUBLES.

The Portland Advertiser, in some remarks on the course taken by the National Intelligencer in relation to the border troubles, says:

to be a forgetfulness of the facts. first, that the State of Maine was not-the first aggressor, secondly, that her measure in relation to driving off the trespassers wantfully pacific thirdly, that the authorized land Agent of Meine was arrested, and quarched off to a British priava, white in the exercise of his official duties. Here lies the hat of the matter. And a British Regundo doing so much, exclainly it could not be expected that Maine was to look idly on, and though subardinate officer of the Crown of Great Britain .. : Our first movemente were defensive our arroad, third and last have been def. and all that Maine has done, has been a resistance of the extravagant claims first set up by Sir John Harvey, and responded to by Mr. Fox, the British Minister at the seat of Covernment. tion was one from which there was no looking We were and are, anxious to see the State united, and in the outset, cheerfully resolved to eacrifice all private and party Cylings upon the alter of public good. We had seen, while Governor Kent and a Whig Lagislature were administering the laws of the State upon this very question, that the state was then disumiled that the blends of Me Administration were doing all in their power by bitterness of opposition, irony and open condemuation, to oppose the firm and decided movements of the Whige

More than this, we saw that the provincial pressa and provincial authorities were taking advantage of our divisions publishing with long and strong comments, the hundred newspaper paragraphs which appeared in the State Administration Journals. We remember to have been told by a provincial man of the Province of New Brunswick, that our State was divided upon this question-that Governor Kent was opposed, and that the British would and could leap, advantage from the division in-Maine. The friends of the administration tri-Maine. umphed even in their opposition to Governor Kent's policy upon this very question, about which there is now so much feeling and excitement, and what was the result of that? Why the very first paper that seached us from New Brunswick, hailed as glad tidings the news of Governor Fairfield's success and Governor Kent's defest. They looked upon the result of the September election as a victory to their upan this very question of the boundary dispute, as a victory it was for it seemed in the eyes of the people of the provinces that the deleat of Governor Kent was a virtual condemnation of his storn and inflexible movements. These opinions were copied into the London Times and other English Journals, and only counteracted apon the other side of the Atlantic by the resimbrance of the fact, that the Congress of the United States during Governor Kent's administration boldly and unequivocally sustained the State of Maine in the recognition of its rights have to a waken unpleasant recollections in the bosoms of any one of our opponents, but in tus-tice to ourselves. In such a case as that which agitates the public mind, we had rather go too far than to fall short of our duty. We second the movements of those politinally opposit to us, for two reasons. Because we are anxious to be united, and because we wish not to ace the question of boundary and the invasion of soil a political question. What censure we have to bestow shalf be kept back, unless forced upon un until such times as the State shall receive no detriment from that censure of men among wa who are honored with high places and who have no te direct the storm."

We mention all this, not from any love we

OBITUARY.

Wie with unafficied regret that we have to announce the death of Mr. GAMALIEL MAR. CHANT, which took place at Goshen, in the State of Indianna, on the 20th of February last, &Mr. M. was formerly the proprietor and editor of he visited the Havans in the hope that the climaté there would be of benefit to him, but after a few months residence at that place he return: ed unimproved in health, and after spending the summer months in part here among his friends, he was induced to journey to the West, where he again hoped the generally tatal disease which had fastened upon him, might be stayed in its progress, if not effectually eradiciated. Would his earthly career, his pure spirit has taken its around a pediar of patent pile passed by flight to the mansions of eternal rost, and the places which have known, him shall know him no more forever.

We feel that some tribute is due to the memorry of our decrased friend, but at the same time. an abler pen is required to dojustice to his many With a heart as warm and sincere in its affections, as it was noble and generous in its nature, unassuming and amiable in his deportment, and always doing unto others as he would have others do unto him. Mr. Marchant endeared himself to all with whom he made acquaintance.

Far a young man, and one who never had en-joyed any other advantages then those derived rom our common schools, and improved in the printing weffice, Mr. Marchant was intelligent on Ill subjects and on all occasions, to a degree that never failed to secure for him the respect of all who persued the emanations of his mind or had the pleasure of listening to his conversation. As the Editor of the Daily Whig at Bangor, Mr. M. not only made limiselt favorably known to a large portion of the people of Maine, but he made he journal take rank in poset of ability and usefulness not exceeded by that of any paper in the State; and it was alike honorable to their intelligence and generosity, and compli-mentary to Mr. Marchant, that his friends in Bangor, at the time when ill-health began to incapacitate him for the duties of his station, and made him think of relinquishing it for good, came forward with a free tender of the services of an editor, and means to a very considerable amount, that he might go abroad for the purpose of reinstating his health, if possible, and thus be enabled to return to his duties, in the discharge of which, he had already won so much credit and respect. They were not willing finally to part with him until circumstances. Imperiously demanded such a separation but these occur red upon his return from the Havana, whether he went at the time hig kind friends manifested their attachment in the manner we have alluded to, and he then disposed of his interest in the paper. As another proof of the respect and confidence felt by the people of Bangor towards Mt. Marchant, they honored him, two years since, with a seat in the Common Council of that city.

It is hard to part with those we love, and whose virtues were the theme of every tongue, but our triend has only led the way to that bourse which sooner or later we must visit, and from which none can return. - With an expression of the deepest sympathy for the stricken wife and orphan child of the deceased, it only remains for us to breathe for him a long and afsectionate farewell.

"Green be the turf above thre, Friend of my early days, None saw thee but to love thee, None knew thee but to praise."

MY DREAM. "I dreamed a dream "twant all a dream." The day had just passed by the burning sun had sunk behind the hills the quiet evening air had not vet lost its sultriness wearied hatura sought repose. I laid nie down and soon found rest in sleep. The eyer active mind now roamed in scenes of fancy. I saw the clouds of heaven gather darkly over my head, and clothe wont it seemed to speak out vengeance wengeance on the sons of men for all their evil deeds committed on earth. I stood and wondered wondered on which mortal's head the ire of heaven Would fall. But white it gazed, a funerel train swept by. A funerel train I thought, for such it seemed but still no corpse, no crape, no dismal tone of bell was there seemed alive, and every heart was light. What curious things we wonthing and which in 6th dreams! This train swept by It passed along the earth just where I stood. The leader of the train resembled naught that I had ever seen he The leader of the was not man or beast his body, head and arms were like a man his legs and feet were like the Hind 'each hoof was clove in twain and from behind he wore a tail, pointed as with a dragon's sting. Close in his rear there followed in the train a thousand laughing, yelping imps, who seemed to glory in their leader's great success, that he had duped so wast a train. Next come a host of men a motly set they weresome gaunt, some fat, some tall, some stout, all sizes, age and shape and each, aloft a banner bore, which told his trade. They seemed a host of Doctors, and each laid claim to the discovery of some magic cure. I really thought it true but as each passed by, I noticed written on behind in great blazing capitals "quack." The train moved on thousands on thousands must have passed I could not stop to count my eyes grew weary of the gaze. I turned away, and when I looked again, the quacks" had all gone by. Next in the train came. Agents and a reckless lucre-loving set they seemed. Each, patent physic sold and every one some doctor's name proclaimed as greatest among the sens of men. They cried out "cures"! "wondrous cures performed "! "who'll buy?" "Life Pills" "I onle Matures" - "Matchless "Senative" Sure remedies for all the ills that flesh is heir to" and then the din of voices grew so long and loud that I could scarcely tell what any said but in the bustle of conflicting claims to public note, I heard most loud the cry of "Hygean

Universal Pilla"! "Take Brandreth's Pilla"! "Take Kingley's Pills" + 4 Rouland's Kalydor" "Swaim's Panagea"! > [Fur the Whig & Couriet.] TEMPERANCE CONVENTION.

Agreeably to previous notice a Convention of the friends of Temperande from towns in the Counties of Penobscot and Piscataquis, was held in the Hammond Street Church, March 14, 15,

The meeting was called to order by Mr. Che. Godfrey.

Col. Alexander Drummond, of Bangor, was nominated and chosen President of the Con-- E. F. Duren and C. A. Stackpole, of Bangor, were chosen Secretaries.

Prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Atwill of Hampden.

On motion of C. Godfrey, Voted, That A. G. Wakefield, Frederick
Lambert, and Henry Little, of Bangor, Hon-S. M Pond of Bucksport, and Rev. W. Parker of Brewer, be a Committee of Arrangements. On motion of Col. Little,

Voted, That every gentleman present, who is a friend of Temperance, be invited to sit with us, vote, and otherwise aid in our deliberations.

On motion of C. Godfrey, Yoled, That a Committee be appointed to prepare the roll of the Convention:

Charles Godfrey of Bangor, J. K. Miller, of Old Town, Jnu. A. Perry of Stillwater, were chosen. On motion of Rev S. L. Pemroy of Bangor, Voted, That the friends of Temperance present, be invited to give some account of the progress of temperance in their neighborhood.

Hampden. Rev. Mr. Atwill remarked that in tiffic town, he was comewhat a stranger; but thought the cause was progressing. He resided here twenty years ago, and the contrast the friends of Temperance are doing something to aid the cause, but there is too much apathy.

The circumstances which have led this intereting roung stranger to our shores if it is not a ... despilication of the word to disignate bet as stranger, though the soft accents of her native Tuscan are as yet the only language familiar to her lip may be thus briefly states.

After spending, like most of the young Italian ladies of 120k, fourteen years of youth in a con vent for her education (the convent of Te Sigmen didlin Ruintegia blin outeraud at Plaranan the was introduced into the midst of the brilliant society of the capital and court of the Grand Duke of Tuscany, at the age of seventeen. She was placed by her parents in the service of the Grand Duches as a "demoiselle de compagnie," or maid of honor. There she was of course nurrounded with all the seductive influences of European aristogratic life, in the midst of the splendors and luxuries of the Pitti Palace. Her mind had however, already by its own self-derived impulses, 38 it would seem, for it was certainly entirely at variance with all-the natural-bias of such an education and such a position taken a decided-direction in the movements of liberal ideas which is the leading characteristic of the to revene from the same, and concur with the Scharge, and which in no country has exercised a postponing the same, and concur with the Scharger influence upon the imagination of ardone yearth then in Rely. Personand cultivation with remarkable force of char acter, vivacity of imagination, and energy of will, it will not be a subject of surprise, that during the agitations that were fermenting in the north of Italy immediately after the French Revolution, she was one of the few females whose social position and personal qualities gained them admission to the secret societies which were conspiring to no Tiely of the dealinion of a loreigh despotism, and to units the whole of that beautiful and happy land under a single sovereignly, which might again restore it to a rank amidst-the family of nations. But we re not aware of any others whose ardor carried them beyond the private machineries of couspiracy, to the actual field of battle and blood. In the attempted rising of-August, 1832, and in the engagements with the Austrians on the banks of the Rimini, in which it will be remembered by our readers that young Louis Bounaparte took part, she conducted herself with great gallantry, and received a severe sabre atroke on the back of heathead, from an Austrian dragoon, (to whom however, though nameless, the justice ought to be done to state that he did not know her to be a woman;) and in her full-to the-ground, her right-arm was broken by the weight of her horse falling upon it. Though auspected, her disguized participation in this affair could not be proved, and after her recovery from her wounds she spent two years in her father's house in Florence, though under a vigilant surveillance. This resulted in the intercep-tion of a letter to her, as secretary of one of the excipme of the society of "La Jeune Italie" which made it apparent that she could not disclose its entire organisation in Tuescopy She was scent. town now presented, was a striking one.
